Gemma Kent

Volunteer Contributor and Section Editor

I got involved with STAND News as a way to keep up writing during my degree. It's great to have another outlet for your thoughts aside from academic essays!

I got to work with writers from various disciplines, commissioning pieces and editing them, as well as researching and writing my own.

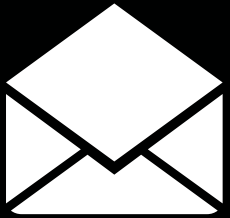

The highlight for me was getting to write about topics outside my area of expertise — it encouraged me to investigate new subjects and learn new things, which helped me to become more engaged with global issues overall.

It's definitely something that prospective employers have picked out from my CV. Showing that you can work with others and write effectively about complex issues is an asset to any application.

Volunteering with STAND News is a great experience going forward in your career!
